Nano technology [No Protective Marking]

Dear Nicola-

I am writing to encourage more research to be done on nano particles. Also labeling should be imperative. At this point no product with nano particles in them lists these much less their size etc.. I have come to realize that nano particles are in many products that we use daily, this realization has come about only after my asking questions at cosmetic counters, health food stores etc... Many employees of these companies don't even know what a nano particle is. I find the way big business manages to bulldoze their way with their products without informing the public about them a sad state of these modern times. Big business is king while we get no more respect than donkeys being brought to the slaughter. Please do what you can to change this unfortunate state of affairs.

Sincerely,
anonymous
